The distribution yield reflects the amounts that may be expected to be distributed over the next 12 months as a percentage of the share price, as at the date shown. It is based on a snapshot of the portfolio on that day. It does not include any preliminary charge and investors may be subject to tax on distributions. It is the fund's policy to offset certain charges against income for accumulation share classes and to offset certain charges against capital for income share classes. These charges include the annual management charge, administration fee and share class hedging fee (where applicable). As a result, yield figures for income and accumulation share classes may differ significantly. The underlying yield reflects the annualised income net of expenses of the fund (calculated in accordance with relevant accounting standards) as a percentage of the mid-market price of the fund as at the date shown. It is based on a snapshot of the portfolio on that day. It does not include any preliminary charge and investors may be subject to tax on distributions. For the fund's income share classes, the distribution yield is higher than the underlying yield only because a portion of the fund's expenses are charged to capital. This has the effect of increasing distribution(s) for the year and constraining the fund's capital performance to an equivalent extent.

*The yield to expected maturity is calculated in the valuation currency of the fund and is gross of fund expenses (including hedging differences). A fund may hold callable bonds whose yields are calculated on the basis of expected maturity.

Where a security has not been rated by Standard & Poor's, Fitch or Moody's, we may use M&G's internal credit rating. Based on a comparison of all available ratings for each security, the most conservative rating (S&P, Fitch, Moody's or M&G's internal rating) is taken into consideration. The ratings so identified are then expressed or converted into M&G's ratings format to obtain uniform information for all securities in the portfolio.

Performance review

Developed and emerging bond markets recorded mixed performance in June, with core government bond yields rising sharply towards the end of the month. Among key themes for investors was the prospect of central banks in Europe and the UK tapering their stimulus measures, largely against strengthening inflation trends. In the US, meanwhile, the Federal Reserve confirmed another rise in interest rates, although the move was widely expected. Investors also assessed the implications of renewed weakness in oil prices, including for oil producers in emerging economies.

In the emerging bond markets, local currency-denominated sovereigns, as represented by the JP Morgan GBI-EM Global Diversified Index, delivered the best returns with a gain of 0.5%. In contrast, hard currency-denominated government debt, as tracked by the JP Morgan Emerging Markets Bond (EMBI) Global Diversified Index, declined by 0.1%. In the corporate bond space, the JP Morgan Corporate EMBI (CEMBI) Broad Diversified Index produced a small positive return of 0.2%. All returns are stated in US dollar terms.

In this environment, the portfolio's returns were helped by its globally diversified exposures across these three main sub-asset classes of the emerging bond markets. In turn, the fund delivered a marginally positive return in the month.

Key changes

Among transaction activity in the month, Claudia added some corporate exposure by buying bonds from telecommunications group Vimpelcom, Turkish bank Yapi Kredi, and diversified Mexican conglomerate Kuo. At the end of the month, the fund's overall allocation to corporate bonds stood at 29.8%, consisting of a 25.3% weighting in hard currency-denominated corporate credit and a 4.5% exposure to local currency corporate debt.

In the government bond markets, Claudia bought back some exposure to holdings that had been sold in early May, including local currency- and US-dollar denominated sovereign bonds in Israel. However, a position was sold in Qatar government debt that had performed relatively well, but where there are now concerns about a serious diplomatic dispute between Qatar and its Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) neighbours. Elsewhere, newly issued five-year local currency bonds were bought from the government of Uruguay, a purchase that was funded by switching out of an index-linked sovereign holding in the country.

In terms of asset allocation, Claudia's key investment themes in 2017 have included increasing the portfolio's overall exposure to local currency bonds. This total allocation stood at around 33% at the end of June, which remains high relative to the fund's history. Within the fund's currency positioning, its allocation to the US dollar amounted to 67.6% at the end of June, while its largest local currency exposures continued to include the Indian rupee, Indonesian rupiah, Peruvian nuevo sol, Uruguay peso, Russian ruble, and Mexican peso.

Claudia has broadly maintained the fund's duration recently, and its level again remained stable in June to end the month at 6.3 years.
