

Highlights

- Risk assets suffered in March, hit by threats of a trade war and a sell-off in the technology sector. Government bonds were supported by a flight to safety.
- The convertibles market reflected falls in stockmarkets, albeit to a lesser extent as they benefited from the protection offered by their bond element. The fund was behind a comparative index.
- Among much activity in the portfolio was the purchase of convertibles from Supernus Pharmaceuticals and RingCentral.

Risks associated with this fund

For any past performance shown, please note that past performance is not a guide to future performance.

The value of investments and the income from them will rise and fall. This will cause the fund price, as well as any income paid by the fund, to fall as well as rise. There is no guarantee the fund will achieve its objective, and you may not get back the amount you originally invested.

The fund may use derivatives with the aim of profiting from a rise or a fall in the value of an asset (for example, a company's bonds). However, if the asset's value varies in a different manner, the fund may incur a loss.

The fund may use derivatives to gain exposure to investments exceeding the value of the fund (leverage). This may cause greater changes in the fund's price and increase the risk of loss.

Changes in currency exchange rates will affect the value of your investment.

The value of the fund may fall if the issuer of a fixed income security held is unable to pay income payments or repay its debt (known as a default).

Further risk factors that apply to the fund can be found in the fund's Key Investor Information Document (KIID).

Hedged share classes aim to mirror the performance of another share class. We cannot guarantee that the hedging objective will be achieved. The hedging strategy will limit holders of the hedged share class from benefiting if the hedged share class currency falls against the currencies of the fund's investments. Please note that this fund comes with further risks that are explained in the Key Investor Information Document.

Where a security has not been rated by Standard & Poor's, Fitch or Moody's, we may use M&G's internal credit rating. Based on a comparison of all available ratings for each security, the most conservative rating (S&P, Fitch, Moody's or M&G's internal rating) is taken into consideration. The ratings so identified are then expressed or converted into M&G's ratings format to obtain uniform information for all securities in the portfolio.

Commentary

Investors had to deal with a series of unsettling events in March, many of them inspired by President Trump. Stockmarkets fell around the world as a result. Trump's imposition of tariffs on a range of US imports from China, which prompted China to retaliate, led to fears of a global trade war. Further reshuffles in the White House added to nervousness, while a data misuse scandal at Facebook threatened to bring a new regulatory regime for giant technology groups that could limit the earnings growth of these companies. Bond markets benefited from a flight to safety, as risk assets were shunned. The convertibles market reflected the falls in stockmarkets, albeit to a lesser extent as they benefited from the protection offered by their bond element. The US dollar weakened relative to sterling and the euro, reducing the returns from US convertibles — the majority of the market — to investors in the UK and Europe. Hedged share classes performed better than the unhedged ones. The fund's returns were behind the Thomson Reuters Global Focus Convertibles Index, with relative performance adversely affected by stock selection in Germany and the Netherlands, as well as exposure to the basic materials sector.

With global trade under threat, some of the fund's largest detractors to performance included companies most exposed to international commerce. This included two convertibles into Russian steelmaker Severstal and German chemical group Covestro. Meanwhile, the sell-off in the technology sector weighed on convertibles from NXP Semiconductor and Altaba. On a more positive note, value was added by equity stakes in companies such as US healthcare firm Allergan, Hong Kong-based software developer Kingdee International and Japanese sportswear supplier ASICS. Kingdee reported better-than-expected results, while Allergan announced encouraging news regarding the development of an anti-cancer drug, as well as benefiting from being seen as defensive.

Key changes

March was an active month in terms of changes to the portfolio. Fund Manager Léonard Vinville purchased two recently issued convertibles, from Supernus Pharmaceuticals and RingCentral, both from the US. Supernus develops drugs for the treatment of diseases of the central nervous system. The group has a promising drug pipeline. RingCentral designs cloud-based software to support modern communications. Both convertibles were attractively priced.

Léonard also took further action to reduce the risk in the portfolio by scaling back positions in convertibles that have performed well and become more equity-sensitive than he desired, since they could be vulnerable to share price falls. For example, he continued the process of reducing the size of positions in convertibles from equity holding company Altaba, technology group Citrix Systems, online travel services firm Bookings and chip maker ON Semiconductor, all in the US. After a good rally, the stake in Kingdee International was sold.

Finally, a mandatory convertible from Allergan reached maturity and was converted into shares, increasing the fund's holding of shares in the drug developer.
